What can space travel teach us about how to approach information security? At the ISF’s recent World Congress in Dublin, Managing Director Steve Durbin sat down with Canadian astronaut Chris Hadfield to find out. They talked about risk, the value of visualizing failure, and building a healthy corporate culture.

References and Supplemental Materials for Today’s Episode:

Information Security Forum
More on Chris Hadfield
Arthur C. Clarke
Edgar Rice Burroughs
Isaac Asimov
2001: A Space Odyssey
Mercury Mark II and Project Gemini
Yuri Gagarin
Alexei Leonov
Apollo 11
Neil Armstrong
Royal Canadian Air Cadets
Royal Canadian Air Force
Cold War
US Air Force
US Navy
Canadian Space Agency
Space Center Houston
Gagarin Cosmonaut Training Center
International Space Station

“Several Boeing 737 Max 8 pilots in U.S. complained about suspected safety flaw.” The Dallas Morning News, 12 March 2019